A Clayton Christensen story

Nearly half the milkshakes sold before 8 a.m.

The reason changed how I build every product.

Mohammed Nagieeb · @nagieeb

The chain asked its customers

Thicker? Sweeter? Cheaper?

It made the changes they asked for.

Sales didn't move.

Mohammed Nagieeb · @nagieeb

Christensen's team stopped asking

They stood in the restaurant and watched.

Who buys? When? Alone? What else do they buy with it?

Mohammed Nagieeb · @nagieeb

One person alone, and a long drive

Just a milkshake, straight to the car.
Something to keep him busy and full through the morning.
And it has to work in one hand.

Mohammed Nagieeb · @nagieeb

The competitor wasn't another milkshake

It was the banana, the bagel, the donut.

Anything you can eat while driving.

Mohammed Nagieeb · @nagieeb

How I apply it

The shop owner doesn't want an e-invoice

In the ZATCA engine I built, that isn't the job.
The job is to keep selling all day without worrying about a fine.

Mohammed Nagieeb · @nagieeb

Save this

4 questions before you change your product

1. Who buys, when, and are they alone?
2. What were they doing a minute before buying?
3. What did they use before you? That's your competitor.
4. What does "job done" look like for them?

Mohammed Nagieeb · @nagieeb

I'm Mohammed. I build products, and the machine that sells them, from Riyadh.

Save this for the next time you want to change your product.
And tell me in the comments: what job do your customers hire you for?

Mohammed Nagieeb · @nagieeb